For 30 Years Was A Top U. S. Clubwoman, Famous Civic Leader, Effective Battler For Social Welfare

Mrs. Constance Amberg Sporborg, for thirty years one of the country's leading clubwomen, died in her home at 23 West Seventy-third Street, New York, after a long illness. She was 81 years old and the widow of William Dick Sporborg, a lawyer.

Mrs. Sporborg was a diminutive, blue-eyed battler for a wide variety of causes dear to her, says the New York Herald Tribune. These included the United Nations, Pan-American friendship, jury duty for women, narcotics control, worth-while motion pictures, and world peace.

"The only way to get into a real fight is with a full head of steam on," recommended Mrs. Sporborg in 1913. She never failed to follow her own advice.

In 1947, when her activity probably reached its peak, she held fifteen official, semi-official, and organizational posts. Mrs. Sporborg was at one time president of New York City and State Federations of Women's Clubs, the National Council of Jewish Women, the Westchester County Federation of Women's Clubs, and the League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Sporborg, whose social and civic career covered more than sixty-five years, was for many years a key figure in major legislative and resolutions committees of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Her liberal, humanitarian influence was expressed in scores of actions taken by the Federation on social welfare, housing and other issues of the 1930s and 40s.

Born in Cincinnati, Ohio, she was a descendant of a long line of teachers, physicians and ministers. At her mother's suggestion, she invited a group of settlement house children to her twelfth birthday party, developed a keen interest in their problems and became a volunteer social worker at fifteen.

Completing her undergraduate work at the University of Cincinnati in three years, she won the University Latin medal. She moved to New York with her family in 1902 and became a volunteer worker at the Christie Street Settlement House; and head of the first junior auxiliary of the National Council of Jewish Women.

In 1902, she was married to Mr. Sporborg and moved to Port Chester, N. Y., where she founded the Port Chester Woman's Club Neighborhood House, and helped to establish the first public nursing service in the community, says the New York Herald Tribune. Mrs. Sporborg was active after World War I in aiding immigrant women and children.

A close friend of the late Carrie Chapman Catt, militant fighter for women's rights, Mrs. Sporborg once observed that Mrs. Catt was second only to her own mother as an influence in her life.

In 1939, Russell Sage College awarded her an honorary L. H. D. degree for her social work. During World War II, she served on the Westchester Defense Council and was a member of the executive committee of Women in World Affairs.

She was a consultant with the United States delegation to the United Nations at San Francisco in 1945 and an observer with Secretary of State Cordell Hull at Lima, Peru, in 1939. Mrs. Sporborg served on the national board of the American Association for the United Nations and attended sessions of the world organization as an observer for women's clubs.

For a number of years she was active in the legislative and international committees of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. She served on the national commission for the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. Her interests also embraced the Golden Rule Foundation.

While president of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, she was appointed by former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman as an adviser to Constitutional Convention on Public Welfare and Consumer Interests.

She headed the department of crime prevention and social maladjustment of the state federation and helped to gather evidence which brought a New York State legislative ban on marathon dances, says the New York Herald Tribune. She also campaigned effectively against the use of marijuana cigarettes and illegal possession of firearms.

Typical of her independent point of view and fiery temperament was an incident in 1947 at the annual convention of the of the State Federation of Women's Clubs in Rochester, N. Y. Someone remarked that she was "a Communist," after she had outlined the work of UNESCO. Mrs. Sporborg promptly replied:

"If that woman, who has a high position on your executive board, ever again calls me a Communist or insinuates it, I offer myself to New York State (Court of Appeals) as a test case to stop that sort of thing."

In 1947, she became a member of the policy committee of National Conference on the German Prob-

Rickover Gets D. S. M., Highest Peacetime Award Of U. S. Navy

Vice-Admiral Hyman G. Rickover, who has been hailed as "father of the nuclear Navy," received the U.S. Navy's highest peacetime award, the Distinguished Service Medal, on the deck of the nation's first atomic submarine, the Nautilus, says the New York Herald Tribune. The award, presented by the former Secretary of the Navy William B. Franke at Groton, Conn., on behalf of the former President Eisenhower, just prior to the inauguration of President Kennedy, tied in with the keel laying for the Polaris submarine Marquis de Lafayette at the General Dynamic Corp.'s Electric Boat Division.

Accepting it, Admiral Rickover gave credit for the success of the nation's nuclear submarine fleet to "all those who contributed to the program." It was just six years ago to the day that the Nautilus backed into the Thames River from an Electric Boat dock and sent the history-making message, "under way on nuclear power."

Secretary Franke said, "Progress will continue because of the vision of Admiral Rickover, who years ago set forth to do a job that looked impossible, and who has persevered to see it through its difficult beginning."

Immediately after the award was presented, the keel for the Lafayette was laid. Herve Alphant, French Ambassador to the United States, expressed the hope that the Polaris submarine will "travel around the world for the defense of liberty."

The Lafayette is the lead ship in the third generation of fleet ballistic missile submarines, says the New York Herald Tribune. Larger than the earlier Polaris submarines, she will be 425 feet long and displace 7,000 tons.

A renewed controversy seems to be developing over the naval career of Vice Admiral Hyman G. Rickover, nuclear pioneer, says the New York Times. Again the question is arising whether the Navy will keep the controversial admiral on active duty or force him into retirement. Again there are indications that his influential Congressional supporters are rallying in his defense against any forced retirement.

To his friends, the Admiral, who just turned sixty years old, has made no secret of his desire to remain on active duty for several

Young Germans' View Of Hitler Era Vague, Says A. D. L. Head

Young people in Germany have a glossed-over picture of the Nazi era, Benjamin R. Epstein, national director of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith, told the closing session of the forty-seventh annual meeting of the League in the Savoy Hilton Hotel, in New York. "German studies reveal that the image German youth has of the Nazi era is that of autobahns, anti-Communism, and an end to unemployment," he said, reports the New York Times. In contrast, American youth visualizes Nazi Germany as a nation that persecuted Jews and adhered to a master-race theory, Mr. Epstein declared.

Another speaker, Samuel Dalsimer, chairman of the League's program committee, said American youth's knowledge of the Hitler period came more from press, film, and television than from textbooks.

The attitude of American youth was based by the two speakers on a preliminary analysis of replies to a questionnaire in a nation-wide poll of high-school students conducted by the League in twenty-seven cities in twenty-one states. The questionnaire, distributed among boys and girls in the ninth to twelfth grades, was prepared at Columbia University by Prof. John Galtung, Norwegian sociologist.

Mr. Epstein, the director, noted that a study of German youth in 1959 indicated that nine out of every ten students interviewed "either knew nothing about the Nazi era or believed that Hitler had done more good than harm."

Arabs Warn Kennedy On Suez Campaign Promise To Jews

A spokesman for the Government of the United Arab Republic declared in Cairo that the Arabs were ready to resist any "pressures" President-elect John F. Kennedy might aply on them to fulfill "campaign promises" to Zionists. The statement, read before the National Assembly, called on the President-elect to cut off all aid to Israel until she abided by the "tens of United Nations resolutions" she had "flouted".

The statement was made by Zulficar Sabry, Deputy Foreign Minister, in answer to a question put to him formally by a deputy, says the New York Times. Mr. Sabry spoke in the absence from the country of President Gamal Abdel Nasser and Foreign Minister Mahmoud Fawzy.

Mr. Sabry was asked in the question, "What measures has the Government taken in reply to the naked interference in our internal affairs as represented by statements by Kennedy (when a candidate) who promised the Jews to open the Suez Canal."

The Deputy Foreign Minister quoted Mr. Kennedy as having said before the Zionist Organization of America last August 25, that he considered it necessary for the United States and other maritime powers to use their influence to open the Suez Canal to Israeli ships. Mr. Sabry referred to President Nasser's Victory Day speech in Port Said on December 23, in which he asserted that the operation of the canal was an internal affair of the United Arab Republic.

N. Y. State To Aid Housing Project For Victims Of Nazis

A state-aided $2,287,673 housing project, with tenant priority limited almost solely to aged victims of Nazi persecution, is soon to rise in Queens, New York. These persons, from Germany and Eastern Europe, have come to the United States since World War II.

The sponsor of the 136-family twelve-story apartment building will be the Fellowship Fund for the Aged Housing Company, 1239 Broadway, says the New York Times. The Fund in turn is sponsored by United Help, Inc., a group formed in 1955 to disburse in the United States a share of funds raised through liquidation of "masterless" Jewish property in Germany.

This property was described as real estate whose Jewish owners disappeared during World War II, presumably victims of the Hitler regime.

To subsidize those who, lacking Social Security benefits, may be unable to afford the prospective $75 to $115 monthly rentals, the Gustav Wurzweiler Foundation has agreed to contribute $50,000 a year to the Fellowship Fund. The Foundation was named for a refugee from Germany.

The Associated Young Men's Hebrew Association and Young Women's Hebrew Association plan to operate a day center — open to the Flushing community as well as to tenants of the building — on the project's first floor.

Later, these same groups plan to build a Youth Center on the southern section of the 80,000-square-foot property acquired by the Fellowship Fund for the project. The site is on the east side of Blind people should be given assistance at street crossings. The person who volunteers should enquire if help is needed and then offer an arm, rather than take that of the blind person. If he does not know how to get to his destination, he should be assisted in taking the right direction.

The angry, fatigued, or emotionally disturbed person can be a dangerous driver. When not feeling well or when worried, it is safer to "cool off" before setting out in heavy traffic or on a long trip.

MONTREAL MARRIAGES

EIDINGER-SHARE

The marriage of Miss Naomi Share, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Share, 6365 Lennox Avenue, to Lawrence Eidinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isidore Eidinger, 4302 Kent Avenue, took place at Shomrim Laboker-Beth Yehuda-Shaare Tefillah Synagogue, on January 22, at six o'clock. Dr. Chaim N. Denburg, Rabbi, officiated, assisted by Cantor N. Krut. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her princess gown was of white peau de soie, with a fitted bodice; scalloped neckline of lace; long, pointed sleeves; and full skirt. Her shoulder-length veil of tulle illusion was caught by a jewelled coronet; and she carried a prayer book with an orchid. Mrs. Fred Gossack, as matron of honour for her sister, was in a gown of light blue satin, fashioned with a fitted bodice; short sleeves; and a bell-shaped skirt. She had a matching hat; and carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations. Joan Gossack, niece of the bride, was flower-girl and wore a mauve organza party dress; and a matching headdress; and carried a nosegay of white carnations. M. Kimelman was best man. The Synagogue was decorated with white and blue chrysanthemums and apple blossom trees. Mrs. Share, the bride's mother, was in a blue satin gown which had a lace bodice; with a matching hat. Mrs. Eidinger, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of blue peau de soie; with a pink hat. Their corsages were of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Eidinger spent their wedding trip at the Nevele Country Club, in Ellenville, N.Y., the bride going away in a red, wool dress, and an Alaska seal coat; with a corsage of red carnations. They have taken up residence at 6320 Victoria Avenue.

• ZIONIST ORGANIZATION •

Of Canada executive board met in Toronto to hear these delegates report on the recent World Zionist Congress in Israel: Lawrence Freiman, president, and chairman of the meeting; Mrs. Harry Cohen, president of Hadassah; Mrs. William Riven, Sol Granek, Samuel Drache, Q.C.; Joseph N. Frank. The meeting unanimously approved the following report submitted to it, on the motion of Michael Garber, Q.C., by the national officers of the Z.O.C. who had met the night before: "1. The officers had a full discussion of the dispute that had arisen at the World Zionist Congress between the national vice-president, Mr. Drache, and the other five Z.O.C. delegates in respect to the decision of the latter to sit as part of the Goldstein-Halperin group. 2. The officers are satisfied that the five delegates, basing themselves on opinion from the legal advisor of the Congress, acted in good faith in sitting as members of the Goldstein-Halperin group for Congress purposes only, believing as they did that they could not function fully as delegates otherwise. While the national vice-president states that the delegates could have made other arrangements, he did not charge that the delegates deliberately violated their instructions. 3. The national officers consider it important to note that when the crucial test came our delegates declined to lend their votes to the Goldstein-Halperin group as this would have given this group an advantage over the Neuman group in the matter of appointments to the World Zionist Executive. By this decisive act our delegates reaffirmed the principle to which the Z.O.C. is committed of remaining neutral between the two World Confederations of General Zionists." The meeting confirmed the appointment of Robert H. Soren as chairman of the 1962 national Z.O.C. convention committee. Among those present at the meeting was Hon. Allan Grossman, M.P.P., recently appointed Minister Without Portfolio in the Cabinet of Ontario Premier Leslie C. Frost.

ARABS WARN KENNEDY

(In his address to the Zionist Organization, Mr. Kennedy said that the influence of the United States "and other maritime powers must be brought to bear on a just solution that removes all discrimination from the Suez Canal.")

Mr. Sabry said Mr. Kennedy had forgotten that, while Israel was calling for the United Arab Republic to carry out the United Nations resolution on opening the canal to Israeli ships, there were "tens of other resolutions" on the Middle East that Israel had flouted.

He said Israel had "boycotted" the Mixed Armistice Nations resolution, to arbitrate disputes and incidents along the Israeli-Arab borders, according to the New York Times. He asserted Israel had "torpedoed" that resolution and added, "Now all Kennedy has to do is withhold aid from Israel had "torpedoed" that resolu- right road."

The Foreign Ministry spokesman noted that Mr. Kennedy had told one audience the United States foreign policy was aimed at "ending the state of war between Israel and the Arab states." He said the President-elect was "forgetting that the Arab people consider themselves in a state of continuous readiness against Israeli aggression."

Mr. Sabry said that Mr. Kennedy, in stating on another occasion that "Israel was here to stay, forgot that abnormal beings cannot remain, especially if they live as blood suckers of the people."

In a 500-word statement, he warned the President-elect that his words and acts would be watched closely by the Arabs, says the New York Times. "We will not hesitate to treat him on the basis of such statements and acts in accordance with the policy which we believe is right for the benefit of the Arabs and humanity," he said.

N. Y. STATE TO AID HOUSING PROJECT

Kissena Boulevard south of Forty-fifth Avenue.

Details of the sponsorship and proposed tenancy of the Fellowship Fund project came to light as the City Planning Commission approved five state-aided middle-income housing projects to provide 860 new apartments at a cost of $15,244,158, says the New York Times. Two of the approved projects were in Manhattan, two in the Bronx, and one — the Flushing project — in Queens.

At a public hearing before the Planning Commission, Senator Jacob K. Javits, in a message read for him, joined a group of rabbis and others in urging rejection of the proposed 385-apartment $7,628,600 River View Towers slated to rise on a site in Riverside Drive between West 139th and West 140th Streets, now occupied by the Yeshivah Haichel Hatorah.

The Republican Senator, one of fourteen persons favoring retention of the private school at the site, wrote that it would be "very much in the public interest" not to force the school out of its quarters.

Social Life: Too Much Too Soon?

BY DOROTHY BARCLAY, IN THE NEW YORK TIMES MAGAZINE, BY PERMISSION

"I am sure," the mother of a teen-age boy wrote to this department recently, "that many parents of teenagers would benefit from reading the opinion of authorities on this problem: What action, if any, is desirable when an intelligent but immature boy is seeing a lot of an even younger girl, whose mother deliberately encourages what amounts to steady dating?

"We feel this is unhealthy and stultifying but hesitate to do any more than express disapproval of the procedure, rather than of the girl herself, in view of the fact that the boy fulfills his obligations at home and at school."

Only a perceptive counselor well acquainted with both the families involved in this situation could give specific help. However, it is an extremely common problem. General questions of this kind are being raised increasingly today, as more and more adults observe at firsthand the difficult and disturbing break-ups of many youthful marriages that result from such constant association.

The divorce rate for brides under 20 is three times the over-all average, statisticians report. This is particularly disturbing in view of the fact that there were 1,500,000 married teen-agers in 1958 and that 47 per cent of the brides of 1959, it has been estimated, were under 19.

Mrs. Frances Beatman, executive director of the Jewish Family Service, was one of the first in the family-counselling field to call our attention to this situation as it directly affects young people in the New York area. There has been considerable "viewing with alarm" for several years, of course, but rarely have the opponents of steady dating and early marriages been able to document their case. They have been without recourse, therefore, against those who contended that they were simply being "moralistic" or old-fashioned in their views.

Today, however, some documentation is available. Actual case records at J. F. S., Mrs. Beatman reported, show "a noticeable increase in the number of young wives who are breaking down, unequal to the job of mothering two or three babies and caring for a home and husband." (The adult advocates of youthful marriage, it should be added here, were also frequently enthusiasts for "having your babies early and not too far apart.")

The young couples are not the only ones showing the strain, Mrs. Beatman added. She said many parents have been coming to the agency "seriously concerned because their sons or daughters, almost totally unprepared for mature responsibility, have decided on marriage."

For some time the supporters of early marriage — basing their case largely on the apparent good adjustment of young veterans and their wives to both marriage and college life under the provisions of the G. I. Bill — had held that the "immaturity" of young lovers was largely in the eyes of the adult beholder.

Mrs. Beatman, countering this, cited a case of two students — the girls 19, the boy 20 — who had recently become engaged after "going steady" for two years. Their numerous quarrels, the girl's outbursts of jealousy, her marked dependence on her fiancé were threatening their chances for a happy family life. Many young people, and especially younger teen-agers, look upon this sort of thing as proof of true love. It is "romantic."

Mrs. Edna K. Upton, a counselor on the staff of the American Institute of Family Relations, Los Angeles, found in a survey of 600 Los Angeles high school students that, in general, they subscribed wholeheartedly to many romantic notions such as these: "the right person" will simply "come along"; one can depend upon one's marriage partner "in all circumstances," and interests and points of view shared today will remain forever unchanged.

The picture that emerges, the institute's bulletin "Family Life" reports, is that of a group of immature, overly romantic and quite unrealistic young people, whose emotional and social characteristics are out of line with those that have generally been found to be associated with successful marriage.

It is Mrs. Beatman's opinion that since the trend to younger marriages is, for better or worse, a reality on the American scene, more earnest efforts must be made to help youngsters evaluate the responsibilities they will face and how best to meet them. Premarital counseling is high on her list of recommendations for improving a young people's prospects for sound marital adjustment.

Mrs. Upton also stressed the need for better preparation at home, in the school and through church and community agencies.

During the recent White House Conference on Children and Youth, considerable attention was paid to the matter of early marriage in a work group for which Mrs. Mildred Rabinow was recorder. Mrs. Rabinow is in the department of parent-group education at the Child Study Association of America.

The young people in her group at the conference, she reported, believed strongly that more family-life courses and more opportunities to work directly with small children would give them a sounder idea of what marriage responsibilities really were.

Throughout the discussion, however, another and newer note crept in continually. It had to do with the opposite problem: young people who are not yet interested in a lively "dating life." These youngsters need some support for their point of view.

Youthful panel members indicated repeatedly that they were pressured to "make a well-rounded, social adjustment" and to display early and continual "maturity in the boy-girl relationship." So great was the pressure, they said, that sixth-graders who did not want to take part in proms, or twelfth-graders who preferred studying ballet, tinkering with engines, or simply enjoying the relaxed company of friends of the same sex, were looked upon as odd — not only by many of their contemporaries but by guidance counselors and, often, parents as well.

Parents willing to accept this pattern in their youngsters are also made to feel peculiar at times, we have observed. All manner of "deeply significant" (and generally unwholesome) reasons may be ascribed for their behavior. Most commonly, the mother who is not continually urging her son to date comes in for the liveliest criticism. Often, such criticism comes from the mothers in her circle who have daughters — which brings us back to the letter that opened this column.

Efforts to reduce such pressures might be well spent. For, while much parental concern in this area has been focused on youngsters who are all too willing to date early and often, the other side of the coin can present a serious problem, too. Too much pressure upon a reluctant teen-ager to "socialize" can have harmful and far-reaching effects.

YOUNG GERMANS' VIEW OF HITLER ERA VAGUE

The American student reaction was "strikingly different," he said, adding: "When asked what they thought most characteristic of Nazi Germans, less than five per cent thought — as German youth did — that in Nazi Germany 'the Nazis did away with Communism, that Hitler built excellent new highways.'"

The League's 1960 American Democratic Legacy medallions went to Harvard, Notre Dame and Brandeis Universities "for their contributions to the enrichment of America's democratic heritage." Henry Edward Schultz, the League's chairman, presented the awards to Erwin N. Griswold, dean of Harvard Law School; the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame; and Dr. Abram L. Sacher, president of Brandeis.

Chancellor John R. Everett, of the New York Municipal College System, told the closing session that keeping students "totally involved in being human," while maintaining "our rapid rate of knowledge accumulation," was one of the crucial challenges of the twentieth century.

The acquisition of knowledge is not the purpose of education, he said, stressing that its real purpose was personal growth, reports the New York Times.

"The anxieties of our time," he added, "are due to the fact that most of us have been subjected to a training program rather than a rich and varied educational experience."

CORRECTION . .

Someone called us up after reading our ad last week and said: "Gee, if all your musicians and entertainers are television stars the way you said, I'd die paying the bill."

All right then, we exaggerated just a little. Not ALL our entertainers are television performers, although nearly all of them know one end of a TV camera from t'other.

The girl who plays bass on a lot of our engagements is one of the Hames Sisters; Tommy Ambrose is one of our "regulars"; and if one of your kids is a jazz fan, he'll know Paul Hoffert.

The cost? We think we can give you a pleasant surprise there. Call us and see.

Synagogue began in 1953 when a Hebrew School building was erected at the corner of Bathurst Street and Edinburgh Drive by the late Joseph Osolky, where an Orthodox "minyan" formed the nucleus of this congregation. In 1954 Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kideckel, now of 132 Hove Street, formerly of 31 Southgate Avenue, invited the congregants to hold services there temporarily, which lasted for over a year. The congregation was formed that year. Sol B. Edell, 111 Bidewell Street, was president; D. F. Harn, 41 Barclay Road, vice-president. A group of fifteen men pledged $6,500 to start a building fund. A site was purchased, and in 1956 a social hall and temporary sanctuary were completed. Next year Rabbi Morris Gorelik was installed. Using Yiddish, Chaplain Beats Record In Army Language Test

Yiddish was the language used by Chaplain Shimon Paskow, Jewish chaplain at Fort Carson, Colorado, when he scored the highest of any one ever tested at the Carson Adjutant General Testing Center, reported the Commission on Jewish Chaplaincy of the National Jewish Welfare Board (JWB) at the three-day annual training conference for full-time Jewish military chaplains on duty in the United States, at Lakewood, N.J. Chaplain Paskow, of Newark, N.J., scored 54 of 60 points in vocal; and 51 of 60 in reading in the tests given to all personnel at Fort Carson who claim a language proficiency other than English. The tests determine the degree of proficiency. Languages tested at Carson now range from Albanian to Yiddish.

In addition to English and Yiddish, Chaplain Paskow also has a fine command of Hebrew which he teaches in a special class for Jewish GIs at Fort Carson. Among the students in his class are two non-Jewish girls from Colorado Springs who are planning to visit Israel. Chaplain Paskow was at one time a teaching fellow on the faculty of the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, in Cincinnati, Ohio. The Commission on Jewish Chaplainey is the instrument through which JWB recruits and serves Jewish chaplains in all branches of the U.S. Armed Forces.

Israeli Ambassador Debates Historian Over Remark On Guilt In Palestine "Atrocities"

Israel's Ambassador to Canada, Yaacov Herzog, and Dr. Arnold J. Toynbee agreed in a debate that atrocities were atrocities and murder was murder, whether committed by Germans, Jews, Britons, or any other peoples.

This was the main conclusion after a two-hour discussion between the ambassador and the historian. The debate resulted from Dr. Toynbee's comment to a group of McGill University students the week before that the treatment of the Palestinian Arabs by the Jews in 1947 was as morally indefensible as the slaughter of 6,000,000 Jews by the Nazis.

Dr. Toynbee made the remark at Hillel House, a Bnai Brith organization for Jewish students at McGill. It was immediately challenged by Ambassador Herzog, who proposed a public debate on the issues.

The debate, conducted in an atmosphere of good will, also took place at Hillel House, which was crowded with students. Ambassador Herzog made the point that if the Jews of Israel were guilty of atrocities, so were various other nations in the course of history, says the New York Times. This drew an assent from Dr. Toynbee.

The Ambassador then maintained that the only relationship between the German acts in the Hitler period and the Jewish acts in 1947 was that in both cases the Jews had been assaulted. In the Palestine conflict, the Jews acted in self-defense, he declared.

In addition, Ambassador Herzog commented, the Nazi acts were planned in cold blood, with the full knowledge of the German Government, and one-third of the Jewish people were wiped out. Mankind will reflect on this crime for generations, he declared. "For my people," he said emotionally, "our mourning is endless, a mourning of eternity."

"Why single out us?" the Ambassador then asked. "Would you agree that the same stigma attaches to almost all nations of the world where soldiers in war have committed atrocities?"

Dr. Toynbee again assented, but he insisted that the moral implications were the same in all atrocities. "What the Nazis did was not at all peculiar to the Germans," he said.

The historian also suggested that human nature apparently created a tendency in people to retaliate in kind. This is probably why the British bombed Port Said and Cairo in 1956 so soon after they themselves had been bombed in World War II, and why the Jews committed their "crimes" against the Arabs, he said.

In discussing the Palestine refugee question, Dr. Toynbee repeated his charge that the Arabs had been "robbed" of their territory. He said that the Arabs had received cruel treatment that was inflicted in cold blood and purposefully. Though not comparable in quantity to the crimes of the Nazis, it was comparable in quality, he asserted.

Ambassador Herzog declared that Israel had already absorbed 70,000 Arabs but would be "committing suicide" to bring in the Arabs now in refugee camps, says the New York Times. For years, he said, they have been nurtured in hate of Israel and are dedicated Israel's destruction.

Mr. Herzog also challenged a statement by Dr. Toynbee that there was a "statute of limitations" on the Jewish claim to Israel. He said the Jews constituted the only nation in history to have kept their identity despite their dispersal, and noted that such statesmen as Lord Balfour, David Lloyd George, and Sir Winston Churchill had supported Jewish aspirations to statehood.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker Receives Canada—Israel Friendship Award

The Ambassador's Ball in honor of the Rt. Hon. John. G. Diefenbaker, Prime Minister of Canada, was sponsored by the Toronto Committee for State of Israel Bonds. Leading figures in the diplomatic, civic, and cultural life of Canada joined in the tribute, at which Israeli Ambassador Yaacov Herzog was the host. More than 650 persons attended the Ambassador's Ball, one of the most colorful and impressive events ever held in the Jewish community. Admission was based on the purchase of State of Israel Bonds.

The Canada-Israel 'Friendship Award, in the form of rare antiquities found in Israel, was presented to the Prime Minister by J. I. Oelbaum, a leader in the Israel Bond campaign. Others at the ball were Samuel Bronfman, Israel Bond president for Canada; John R. Devor, Toronto general chairman; and Mark A. Levy, who was chairman of the ball.

In acknowledging the tributes paid to him Prime Minister Diefenbaker emphasized that Israel "has grown beyond the stage of a gallant experiment." Hailing Israel as "an industrial pacemaker for its region, a spiritual center for new and varied forms of Jewish life and for the highest Western values," the Canadian Prime Minister said that her "progress has been heartening."

"Soon Israel may be able to stand on its own feet economically," he added. "But there are still refugees to be admitted and cared for. Today in rebuilding the land of their forefathers the people of Israel also bear witness to those moral and religious truths that find supreme and imperishable expression in the Bible. It is only as a representative democracy with a high sense of social purpose that Israel can be true to its heritage."

The ball was attended by consular representatives from various countries, led by the dean of the diplomatic corps, Francis Lacoste, French Ambassador to Canada. John Bassett, publisher of the Toronto Telegram, announced that, in honor of Prime Minister Diefenbaker, a number of scholarships will be established at universities in Canada for students from Israel.

RICKOVER GETS D.S.M.

more years to continue his work in developing nuclear power plants for submarines and surface ships.

He faces compulsory retirement in the next eighteen months. It will require a special action, not unprecedented, by the Secretary of the Navy to retain him on active duty. Questioned as to his status, the Navy said Admiral Rickover would have to retire before July 1, 1962, unless he were retained by special order of the Secretary. In the latter case, he would remain on active duty two more years, or until he had reached 64.

His future active status, the Navy said, is determined by regulations. These specify that any officer below the rank of fleet admiral must retire before the end of the fiscal year in which he reaches his sixty-second birthday. Admiral Rickover will be sixty-two on January 27, 1962.

There is no indication yet whether the Navy intends to grant a special extension of duty. If previous actions are an indication, it will be reluctant to retain him in uniform, according to the New York Times. Twice before in recent years the Navy has sought to retire Admiral Rickover, who has tended to alienate the command with his unorthodox methods, disregard for protocol and regulations, outspoken manners, and Congressional influence.

In 1953, for example, he was passed over for promotion from captain and faced compulsory retirement until Congress prodded the Navy into promoting him to rear admiral. Again in 1958, he faced retirement until the Navy, once more under Congressional prodding, promoted him to vice admiral. This permitted him to remain on duty four more years.

The admiral's Distinguished Service Medal, the Navy's top peace time award, is in recognition of his "unusual foresight and unswerving perseverance" in developing a nuclear navy.

Even this has caused misgivings among the admiral's supporters, for there is concern that it represents the traditional military accolade to an officer before retirement.

In urging continued active duty for the admiral, his supporters are stressing that the naval reactor program is in a critical, formative period. They predict important technical advances in reactor design, expanding construction of nuclear ships and the formulation of regulations and procedures for their safe design and operation.

With several more years service, they argue, Admiral Rickover will be able to see his program through to the point where it is incorporated as a permanent part of the Navy, says the New York Times. If he were forced to retire, they fear, the program would be split among several Navy bureaus and might disintegrate.

The retention of Admiral Rickover is likely to be another problem to land on the desk of President Kennedy, just as it did on President Eisenhower's.
